FOREWORD

PRODUCTION is over; the finished picture is ready to be placed before the public. The reels are in the projector, and we turn to a set far different from the one on which we have been working. Here, we have a few of the shots that went to make up the whole production, glimpses of the laughter and fun that will recreate time and time again the story of the filming of our stars. There have been technical difficulties and temporary setbacks, but now the light flashes on. The world premiere of the Class of 1942 is about to begin.

DEDICATION

WE DEDICATE THIS BOOK TO THE TWO MEMBERS OF OUR CLASS WHO HAVE BEEN GIVEN ROLES IN A GREATER PRODUCTION THAN OURS.

SHOOTING SCHEDULE

Started shooting first scene in September 3, 1938 under Jane Stedge and her assistants Warren Austin, Rose Gannon, and Agnes Erikson.
Held cast luncheon in Studio Cafeteria.
Time out for some social dances on the lot.
Winter skating scenes taken at Congers Lake.
On location at the World's Fair in May.
Cast given short leave of absence for rest cure.

Back to studio under new director, Warren Austin and assistants Andy Martz, AnnaStine Svahn, and Regina Kelley.
Tea served after working hours in dressing rooms following ballroom scene.
Action shots at Bear Mountain skating rink.
Stars dashed to Sun Valley for brief rest.

On location under Douglas Shortal, John Nelson, AnnaStine Svahn, and Jane Stedge.
Revival of "The Buccaneer" for reproduction.
Held studio formal; set decorated in garden style.
Stars given short rest before completion of picture.

Back to shooting under final directorship of AnnaStine Svahn, and assistants Andy Martz, Gloria Bontempi, and Bernard Ketterer.
Ups and downs suffered in cast roller-skating party.
A short fling at theatrical acting in the highly successful "Swing Fever".
Held square-dances on lot to help defray cost of production.
Fast work after hours around the set to organize the studio record, the '42 "Saga".
Last minute directions; serious shooting in June.
Picture completed; stars given bonus and sent on to greater studio.

TODAY, June 13, 1950, I had the strangest experience. Wait, I'll tell you about it.

I was walking down the street when suddenly it began to rain so violently that I dashed into the nearest doorway, which proved to be a movie house. Without bothering to notice what was playing, I bought a ticket and sat down as the show began.

The program started with the singing of the national anthem, as led by the prominent Metropolitan baritone, Arthur Cockcroft.

When I had settled down again, the newsreel came on; and a burst of deafening applause greeted the first woman president of the United States, Jane Stedge, who was approving the plans by architect, Anna-Stina Svahn, for an army barracks. There were many interesting shots of the peace conference, with the dean of M. I. T., Richard Mathison, and Janice Lewis, author of the column, "Listen America," as representatives of the United States. A review of the war heroes followed, and I was very proud to pick out some old classmates of mine, Andy Martz and Ben Hersey in sailor uniforms, and Richard Zwerlein and Douglas Shortal, aides of General MacArthur. Tribute was paid to the brave, unnamed nurses of the Red Cross; and in the victory parade I could distinctly pick out the faces of Gertrude Scott, Regina Kelly, and Gloria Reilly. Doris Holzhauer, national leader of the organization, was reviewing the parade with her secretaries, Shirley Keller, Mary Keefe, and Adelaide Dillon. The Mathematician's Conference at Columbia University showed Alan Davies and Curt Reinhold astounding the other professors with their concise explanation of the fifth dimension, with Ruth Cooper, Esther Polhemus, and Thelma Strom recording the proceedings for posterity.

In a lighter vein was the Woman's Page. Rose Gannon, who always photographed well, was shown modeling hats. Explanations and interpretations were given by Helen Keenan, one of America's foremost designers.

The sports reel, narrated by Jack McKeon, followed next. Excerpts of the Heavyweight Boxing bout for World Championship, at Madison Square Garden, showed Warren Austin connecting his knock-out blow in his fourth consecutive defense of the title. John Nelson, sports commentator, was at the ringside with Tom Zerecker, editor of the "Herald Tribune", and Larry Bonhotal was in the crowd, taking candid shots of the glamour girl of the year, Flora Van Ness. The Big Five Basketball Team, captained by Bernie Ketterer and managed by Carl Fogelin, ended their brilliant season by winning the National trophy at the Garden the following evening. Claire Sosna was pictured on her way to the Olympics after having won the national woman's skating title for speed. Shots of Santa Anita race track showed Reggie Whalen, prominent playboy, performing a business transaction with Bob Schupner for possession of the famous horse, Landcracker, grandson of Sea Biscuit.

The feature picture was named, "Symphony Temperature", with Jeanne Karrell playing the ingenue lead. The story was by Gloria Bontempi, and the gorgeous costumes were designed by Helen Cumming. Agnes Keefe almost stole the show with her comedy portrayal, and John Spruill had then standing in their seats with his rendition of "Swing Low, Sweet Chariot."

An educational short presented Eleanor Stark, leading lady chemist of the day, and her assistants, Lora Webb and Ruth McLeod, at their laboratory, where they are completing a nationwide project of home nursing. Ida Rudden, and Margaret Dennis, typical housewives, were demonstrating the course.

A musical feature showed the revival of good-old-fashioned square dancing, as explained by Mary Kerlin, and performed by Loretta Locke and Bill Crandall. The whole program came to an end with the singing of "God Bless America", led by the musical team of Vera Paxton, Jack Lick, and Helen Wennerholm.

It was still raining when I finally came out of the movies, but it didn't bother me any more, for my mind was filled with memories of those far off days at Congers High School with the Class of '42.

STAND-INS

BLINDED by star dust and under the delusion of glamour, the Stars of '42 hereby bequeath their outstanding characteristics to next year's cast. Any resemblance is purely coincidental.

Bernie Ketterer is putting all his faith in Bill Ebner to bring the basketball team through to V . . . —

Jean Whitten, with her sunny disposition, will fill Gloria Bontempi's place very nicely.

Upon Jean Entwistle, Larry Bonhotal bestows his excellence as class cameraman.

Ruth Cooper leaves her calm, subdued manner to Dianna Kerlin, while Mary Kerlin presents Grace Cooper with her vim, vigor and vitality.

Pauline Garlick, who doesn't do so badly herself, should consider herself fortunate to receive AnnaStine's popularity.

Jack Lick's enchanting voice, and Vera Paxton's musical talent are to be passed on to Frank Austin and Tommy Wanamaker respectively.

Anne Hodgkins will take up where Thelma Strom left off in always helping out.

We know that Leonard Hess will be more than glad to inherit Bob Schupner's unassuming (?) manner.

Flora Van Ness's earmarks of being fair and lovely will be duplicated by her beneficiary, Betty Noyes.

Doris Shortal is to acquire Mary Keefe's appreciation of music.

Regina Kelly deservingly hands over her good sportsmanship to Florence Nelson.

Gene Heath's worries will be over when he receives Eleanor Stark's high marks, while Curt Reinhold's rating on the honor roll goes to Lois Rose.

Peter Parker will aptly carry on in Bill Crandall's place as class Casanova.

Claire Sosna's specialty of anything along athletic lines goes to Helen Kaufman and Jean Eggleston.

Alex Goodman, Kenny MacKay and Leonard Aspinall are to share equally Warren Austin's and Starchy's carefree spirit.

Doris Holzhauer has consented to leave her role of spitfire to Marjorie Borel.

Janice Lewis has offered her willingness to work to Eleanor Doellner.

Andy Martz is quite confident that the Service Corps will function well in the hands of Robert Hicks.

Agnes Keefe, the class comedienne, would like to leave this honor to Johanna Castagnola.

Harry Whalen, the life of the party, relinquishes his position to Richie Eckhart.

Ben Hersey leaves his seat in Room 200 to his buddy, Smoky Gleason.

No one is more qualified than Margaret Shaw to receive Jane Stedge's winning personality.

Rosemarie Gannon has decided to give her place on the cheerleading squad to Gloria Hyde.

We are quite sure that next year's editor of the "Congeronian" will be more than grateful to receive Tommy Zerecker's deadline worries.

Adelaide Dillon relinquishes her seat on the Rockland Lake bus to Bill Dittmer.

Helen Wennerholm and Lora Webb bequeath their conservative manner to those quiet little ladies, Genevieve Porri, and Mary Alice Shiels.

Esther Polhemus very graciously wills her nimbleness on the typewriter to William Krausser.

Jeanne Karrell very willingly bequeaths her well-worn French III book to Germaine Lallia.

Vivacious Helen Keenan will be readily replaced by Charlotte Chamberlain.

John Allen and Spencer Conklin are to become the proud possessors of Alan Davies' mathematical brilliance.

Carl Fogelin and Loretta Locke wonder whether Fred Natale and Joan Best could use a few inches of their height . . . It's theirs for the asking.

Miriam Dulmer is to receive Shirley Keller's distinction of class "glamour girl."

Gertrude Scott and Ruth McLeod refuse to divulge their selling technique in the Cafeteria to any one but Ruby Phillips.

Robert Polyblank's own great store of athletic versatility will be greatly increased by Sid Zenovic's and John Spruill's bequest.

That "special" place that Dick Mathison holds in Wimpy's heart will be filled by David Gordon.

Adele Keoughan is to receive Gloria Reilly's .22 to help keep an eye on Eddie.

John Nelson has promised to remove the horseshoe from his boxing gloves before giving them to John Farrell.

Margaret Dennis and Ida Rudden have cheerfully agreed to give the something borrowed to anyone in need of it.

Attention Herbie Walden! If you see the World Premiere of the Class of '42 you will find the hiding place of Art Cockcroft's ESQUIRE.
